SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.

1. Most of the Mongolian troops in Northeast China and Korea are from Inner Mongolia, but there are some units from the Mongolian People's Republic.
2. The Mongols from both groups get on well together, but much less well with members of non-Mongolian groups. The Mongols from the Mongolian People's Republic tend to fear the Chinese, and the Mongols from Inner Mongolia support them against the Chinese. On the other hand, the Outer Mongols refer to the Soviets as "blind oxen" and defend the Inner Mongols from the bullying which the latter tend to accept. Up to May 1951 there had been no major clashes arising from this situation, though several minor ones had developed.
